MEMORANDUM FOR: Colonel White

At your request I visited the John F. Kennedy Center for Special Warfare at Fort Bragg on 4 and 5 May. The main purpose of the visit was to determine whether it is useful both to the Center and to the Agency to continue to post a full-time Agency liaison officer there and to get a better idea of just exactly what this job amounts to.

The Center and [redacted] were extremely hospitable and laid on elaborate arrangements to acquaint me with the various programs of the Center. I had intensive meetings with General Stilwell, the Commanding Officer, and all of the senior members of his staff charged with running the Center's programs. All of the sessions were free flowing, frank, full, and useful. 25X1

I also had private sessions with [redacted] to go over in detail the nature of his work. My impressions follow: 25X1

a. There is merit in continuing to keep a full-time liaison officer at the Center. For one thing, the emphasis given in the training and doctrine of the Special Forces with regard to counterinsurgency, civic action, unconventional warfare, etc., is very much akin to our own doctrine and programs in the PM and counterinsurgency fields. In my view, it is essential that the Agency be in position to keep the Center's programs and doctrine under constant review and watch to ensure that the Center's programs and our own are in general accord. This is a two-way street. As the Agency's doctrine, needs, and programs are revised, there is a need to keep our liaison officer informed so that the proper input can be made at the Special Warfare Center. There is no doubt in my mind that the Center will welcome all such advice or guidance.

b. The Special Forces missions, responsibilities, and training are so similar to our own that I view the Special Forces as presenting the Agency with potential opportunities for use in our own operations under our control. To count on such use is no doubt difficult. For one thing, such use would involve policy considerations of serious importance at the Washington level. For another, there is precious little sentiment within the Agency for using military expertise of this kind. The point is, however, that skilled manpower for counterinsurgency and paramilitary programs is in short supply, and it is not in the Agency's interest to ignore the potential value of the Special Forces for our own operations. I can conceive, for example, of times and circumstances when Special Forces units in mufti might be of crucial value to us. In any event, it is in the Agency's interest to maintain a bridge between us, the Army, and the Special Forces.

c. If the need for such a bridge is recognized and agreed, it is in the Agency's interest to maintain full-time liaison, for we must be sensitive to what we can do to be of help in guiding the Special Forces and its programs to suit our programs and objectives. As General Stilwell told me, he believes the Agency is doing well by the Center but in the final analysis only the Agency knows what it has to offer and the Agency must determine to what extent it will help.

d. Because of the importance of monitoring the training programs at the Center, it is my view that the liaison officer assigned there should be subordinate directly to the Director or Deputy Director of Training. The liaison officer, however, must be in position to communicate directly with any Agency component. He need not funnel all of his correspondence through the Office of Training, but OTR should be saddled with the ultimate responsibility of providing guidance, advice, and answers to questions <sup>from</sup> for the liaison officer. 25X1

A word about [redacted] terms of reference and the DOD/CIA-agreed functions he is to perform. I went over each one of these terms of reference with [redacted] and they add up as follows (a copy of his functions is attached):

a. With regard to 3.a. concerning the "delineation of the roles, missions, and responsibilities" of CIA and the Special Forces, this is more fiction than fact. He has so participated in one field training exercise, but clearly any such delineation would be made at the Washington level rather than at Fort Bragg or intermediate military echelons.

b. 3.b. is a bit of a misnomer. He is, for the reasons stated above, not a channel for intelligence studies, but he does respond by providing special studies if asked. This 25X1 is a frequent occurrence.

d. With regard to 3.d. and the provision of assistance and support to the Center in training techniques and doctrine, [redacted] does a good deal in this field. I told [redacted] I thought he should spend more time on the rostrum lecturing at least to the instructors, if not to the students, and that this is an ideal way to provide input on doctrinal matters. General Stilwell told me that he would like [ ] to do more of this, and more will no doubt be done. The Agency meanwhile should do more to provide some of the key instructors of the Center staff with the kind of specialized training that we can give at [ ]. This was done on two occasions last year. It should be done more frequently, and [ ] should ensure (and I have spoken to him about this) that the Center instructors so trained should make use of this by applying what they learn in some of the training courses offered at the Center.

e. With regard to 3.e. and assistance in the development of detailed unconventional warfare and special operations plans in support of unified commands, specific operational cases have not arisen to date. [ ] does, however, sit on the Center's planning committee which considers the details of plans in support of CINCLANT for field training exercises. This same procedure would apply in the event of real-situation planning.

f. 3.e.(2) provides for the "exchange of operational information on a need-to-know basis." [ ] does not receive many questions on this. They are a rarity and have come only once or twice and, on these occasions, from General Stilwell himself.

g. With regard to 3.f. concerning mutual assistance in the area of logistics, this is not a particularly active account, but [ ] is in position to be of assistance if necessary.

RECOMMENDATIONS:

a. Maintain the Agency's liaison at the Center. To withdraw it would be completely misunderstood by the Center, which prides itself on the Agency's representation as well as representation from State, USIA, and AID.

b. Keep [ ] in this post but transfer his direct subordination from the Executive Director to the Director or Deputy Director of Training and make the Office of Training responsible for keeping abreast of the job and for recommending a successor within the next year or so.

c. The Agency should take a new and deep look at the capabilities of the Special Warfare Forces of the U. S. military services with a view toward establishing relationships that can count on the use of such forces as appropriate.

If you agree with the first two recommendations, I have attached a memorandum for your signature to be given to the Office of Training with copies to other offices who need to know about [redacted] subordination and OTR's responsibilities. I am frank to say I am not at all certain as to how to proceed with the third recommendation. A paper directive is hardly likely to get the ball rolling. This requires some soul-searching and some discussions primarily with DD/P and SOD.
